FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENT

Germany is the third-most frequent investor in Louisiana, with 18 projects invested since 2003. These projects represent a total capital investment of $129.80 million, with a creation of approximately 173 jobs.

Louisiana companies have also established a presence in Germany including 5 direct investments that have resulted in capital expenditures totaling over $32.8 million and the creation of 66 jobs.

CASE STUDY

In September 2013, BASF announced the development of a polyurethanes blending facility in Geismar. The project had capital investment of $42.60 million with 22 new direct jobs created and an estimated 145 new indirect jobs. Another 175 jobs due to construction were created. The project is estimated to create 170 new direct jobs with an average annual salary of $70,440 and an additional 945 new indirect jobs.

In November 2016, BASF began plans for another expansion that will nearly double its Louisiana MDI production. The blending facility has improved efficiency and shortened the supply chain to customers. BASF polyurethanes enable manufacturers to produce leading automotive, furniture and construction industry goods.

"This project demonstrates our commitment to the future growth in this region and market. The project also further strengthens our position as a leading supplier of chemistry for sustainable solutions."

CULTURAL TIES AND RESOURCES

HISTORY

From 1848 to 1900, Germans were the largest foreign-language speaking group in Louisiana. By 1850, one-fifth of Louisiana's population was German-speaking, and there were more than 50 German-language newspapers and journals published in the state. Louisiana's German citizens constitute both one of the oldest and one of the newest Populations in the state. 370,440 German descendants live in Louisiana.

DEUTSCHES HAUS: THE GERMAN PRESENCE IN THE GULF SOUTH

deutscheshaus.org

Deutsches Haus is an organization founded in New Orleans with a mission to celebrate and foster the rich culture, musical heritage, language and history of the German people. Festivals such as Oktoberfest and Volksfest are held around the Gulf South Region featuring authentic German food and music. The organization established a scholarship fund through University of New Orleans's Center Austria. Students will be chosen by the university to study in German during the summer, promoting the German language and history.

The German-American Cultural Center (GACC)

The GACC celebrates the important contributions to Louisiana history and culture made by Germans with exhibits, lectures, programs and other educational activities.

EDUCATION

Louisiana State University took part in a national initiative to promote German culture and language on college campuses. The initiative, Do Deutsch, coincided with a week-long visit from German university officials. The university also offers numerous international exchange programs with Germany.
